1. In discussing the terms of the Franco-Peron Protocol with Spanish representatives in Argentina, Miguel Miranda, President of the Argentine National Economic Council, showed great interest in the production and quality of products from the Spanish colonies in West Africa, and repeatedly asked for concrete information on the subject. Miranda's major interest was in cacao, yucca, and tobacco; however, he also inquired about certain types of wood and medicinal drugs.

2. [REDACTED] one-fifth of the tobacco consumed in Spain comes from Spanish Guinea, but that the cacao production exceeds consumption in Spain and allows a surplus for export to the United States and European countries.
